Elephant sculpture heading to local park came from tree of controversy

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Form something old, something new:

Thanks to the City of West Sacramento, a Sacramento sculptor, a chainsaw, and a deal with a West Sacramento preservation group, a hunk of that old "butternut tree" removed from the Bridge District in 2010 will see new life in a local park.

Artist Adam Bradley has turned the chunk into the bust of an elephant, soon to be installed as a climbable play structure in a Southport park. The city has just finished soliciting bids for the installation work. Kids will begin clambering on the elephant sometime in the next few months at Emile "Whitey" Boisclair Park, 1728 Lake Washington Boulevard.

"Butternut tree" is in quotes here because, while environmentalists fought so save the big tree in the belief that it might be the largest butternut specimen in existence, city officials say it really wasn't. It was neither a butternut nor "a tree," they told the News-Ledger, and it hadn't (as some believed) been alive since the 1850s.

That is: the tree wasn't one specimen, but three grown together, said city urban forest manager Dena Kirtley. That was apparent after the West Sacramento Conservancy lost its preservation battle and the tree was removed to make way for Bridge District development.

"You could clearly see the three trunks," she commented last week.

Long before that, UC Davis walnut expert Chuck Leslie looked at the nuts from the tree and concluded they were "classic examples of paradox (walnut) nuts – they don't even resemble a butternut." The "paradox walnut" is a hybrid of black and English walnuts. The big tree didn't have a graft line, so city officials think it grew from seeds and not from nursery stock.

CalTrans photos supplied by the city and the memories of a former resident near the tree site, Dale Payne, seemed to support the theory that the tree was much younger than 150 years old. So did a look at the growth rings after it was chopped, said Kirtley.

But the tree on Tower Street, just north of the US 50 bridge over the river was, by all accounts, very big.

The conservancy's Jeri Wingfield reported in 2010:

"I went and got a long measuring tape and asked my husband Bill to help me measure it. It was something like 22 feet, four inches around."

In any event, following a controversy argued out on both sides of the Sacramento River, the big tree came down in 2010. But not before a legal challenge and a settlement between the City of West Sacramento and the West Sacramento Conservancy. Some of the terms of that deal:

"The city will plant 45 specimen trees (24-inch box) in heritage groves. The selection of the trees, planting sites, and planting process will be determined in consultation with the Conservancy," a City of West Sacramento press release said at the time.

Blue line of light planned for tower

A tall structure at the Port of West Sacramento will soon sport a blue band of light near the top – part of a general effort to spruce up the facility and increase public awareness about it.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon recently quipped that a lot of West Sacramento residents don't know there is a port, even if they live in the neighborhood called "Southport." The facility is actually near the geographical center of the city, near Harbor and Industrial boulevards.

For just about $20,000, the port is contracting with Fluoresco Lighting and Signs to put up the LED lights with blue acrylic facing. The ten-inch wide lights will be mounted near the top of the 200-foot grain elevator.

Electricity costs will be part of the operation cost for the port, which is now leased to a private operator.

The blue band is expected to be lit at night beginning by July 1, a city official told the News-Ledger.

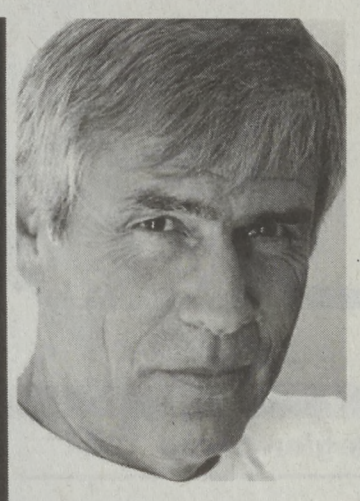
Farms like Ed Silva's were heart of West Sac

Note: Longtime West Sacramento resident Ed Silva passed away recently and the following article, penned a few years ago, is re-printed below in his memory. Ed was one of the nicest men I ever met and he was full of wonderful stories about the long ago days when West Sacramento was mostly rural and populated by hard-working farmers and dairymen like him. He was a good and honorable man who loved his family and made his community a better place to live, and he will be greatly missed by all those who knew, loved and respected him.

Ed Silva is 80 years old now and is a lifelong resident of West Sacramento. He is soft-spoken and easy to like and if you can drag him away from his still very busy life for a few minutes, he has some wonderful stories to tell about West Sacramento's agricultural past. He was raised on a family dairy farm only a stone's throw away from where he now lives on Deerwood Street, land that was developed and paved over many years ago to make way for the Port of Sacramento and the many homes all around Park Boulevard. And although most of the current residents of West Sacramento know very little about their city's agricultural past, Ed remembers it well.

"My dad, Manuel Silva, came here way back in 1914, from a little village on San Miguel Island, which is in the Portuguese

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Archipelago of the Azores," recalled Ed, "and like most immigrants back in those days, he was trying to escape poverty and make a better life for himself. Once here, he moved around quite a bit and worked on ranches in Auburn, Natomas and Dixon before finally ending up in West Sacramento around 1932."

When Ed was only a month old, the growing Silva family rented a dairy from what was then known as Caledonia Farms, located near what is now the Nor-Cal Beverage Company and Parkstone Center, the large medical building which anchors the southern end of Park Boulevard.

"Back then," explained Ed, "there was no Jefferson Boulevard where it is today. In fact, the Jefferson Boulevard of my youth was where Park Boulevard is nowadays. Anyway, around 1937 my dad bought about 50 nearby acres of his own, which included a dairy of about 90 cows, all of whom had to be milked twice a day by hand until milking machines became available. Our milk was some of the best around and was delivered fresh to Crystal Creamery every day in big ten gallon cans."

Ed went on to explain that when he was young, much of West Sacramento was nothing more than grassland for cows to graze upon.

"From what is now Stone Boulevard to 19th Street to Virginia Street was all cow pasture," recalled Ed, "as was most of the land from across Park Boulevard all the way west to West Acres School. And many was the time that we would get a call from the school wanting us to get right over there because some of our cows had busted down a fence and ended up in the school yard. And mending fences was just one of my many chores. I learned how to drive a tractor at an early age and like many of the teenagers back then, I was pretty good at bailing hay. And believe me, there was always plenty of work to do on the farm, for both the boys and the girls, and there were lots of times when my dad would meet me at the school bus to get me started as soon as possible on a full afternoon of work."

'Mending fences was just one of my many chores,' said Ed.. 'I learned how to drive a tractor at an early age and like many of the teenagers back then, I was pretty good at bailing hay. . .'

Over the years, two wives would give Manuel Silva six children, four sons and two daughters, of which Ed was the youngest, and as they got older, all the boys were taken into the family business as full partners. They also all served their country during times of war and also inherited their father's strong work ethic.

"In addition to the dairy," said Ed, "we also farmed several acres of alfalfa, barley, wheat, sugar beets and tomatoes. Then around 1944 the Port of Sacramento used eminent domain to buy most of our property and construction of the port started in all phases around 1949. We moved our dairy cows out to Elverta where we bought a 160-acre ranch with the help of Crystal Creamery, but we still farmed quite a few acres in West Sacramento all the way up until the late 1970's. Dad passed away in 1984 and what land we had left in West Sacramento was turned into a little subdivision known as the Silva Estate Subdivision, which still remains in the family to this day."

"Looking back on it," said Ed nostalgically, "it was a really good life and a fun way to grow up. I was out-of-doors all the time and hard work never hurt anyone. And I've tried to pass that same work ethic down to Carla, Julia and Eddie, my three children, just as my father passed it down to me. And although West Sacramento is not at all like it was when I was a young man, it's still a wonderful place to call home."

Obituaries

Edward Silva

Ed Silva passed away peacefully on May 18, 2013 surrounded by family and friends. Born January 2, 1931 to Manuel and Julia Silva of the Azores Islands, he was the youngest of six children and a first-generation American. A lifelong resident of West Sacramento, Ed was raised on the family dairy farm, Silva Bros. Dairy (where the Port of Sacramento now stands), which provided daily milk to the Crystal Creamery. Eventually he and his three brothers were taken into the business as full partners by their father. He and his brothers served their country during times of war, as well. In addition to working on the dairy while attending school at West Acres and later Woodland High, Ed also farmed alfalfa, barley, wheat, sugar beets and tomatoes on several acres stretching from the back of Linden Road to where Lowe's is now located off Lake Washington Boulevard.

Ed and his late wife Grace were active members of St. Elizabeth Catholic Church and supported many functions. Once Ed retired, he and Grace loved to travel worldwide. They journeyed annually to their place in Cabo San Lucas, and also visited many countries including Egypt, France, Italy and Rome (where they visited one of their favorite destinations, the Vatican, numerous times). Ed's most treasured trips were to Portugal and the Azores Islands, where he met relatives and friends of his parents in Faial and Pico.

Ed also enjoyed working in his vegetable garden, attending family reunions, participating in Portuguese Festas, going to bullfights and watching sports – especially boxing and the 49ers. He was preceded in death by Grace, his wife of 45 years; his brothers Manuel, Frank, and Joe; and his sister Marjorie Simonson. Ed is survived by his children, Julie (Chuck), Eddie, and Carla (Ernesto); his grandchildren Laura, Perry and Chip; his companion Cecilia; and his sister Laurene Leal, as well as many loving nephews, nieces, cousins and childhood friends. Services were presided over by Fr. Ed Silveira.

Ed was a soft-spoken and easy-to-like man, and he will be missed greatly. In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory can be made to the American Cancer Society Relay For Life of UCLA at http://tinyurl.com/EdSilva or to the American Lung Association.

THE TREE from page one

"The city will install a commemorative plaque recognizing the large, hybrid butternut tree. The city will arrange to have the wood from the tree reused in a manner that respects the size and quality of the wood, including artwork, furniture and other interior decorations that can be viewed by the public. A cross-section of the tree trunk showing the rings and age of the tree will be donated to the West Sacramento Historical Society."

The City also agreed to install a monument honoring the 1850s-era C.W. Reed nursery at the site, although officials don't believe the big tree came from the nursery. That plaque has been designed by local artist Jahn Kloss. It hasn't yet been installed.

The City's Dena Kirtley said local government made several big chunks of the downed tree available to "as many local wood sculptors and artists as we could find."

Artist Robert Beauchamp of Zamora made a "really nice bench with end tables" that will go outside the city council chambers," she told the News-Ledger.

"Adam Bradley ended up with the very large chunk," added Kirtley. "It was from the base of the tree, so it was pretty massive."

That's the one that is headed for the park playground.

"I think it was just under 5,000 pounds when I received it," Bradley told the News-Ledger. "It probably lost 500-600 pounds of water weight (before carving)."

Why an elephant?

"He lets the wood talk to him," said Kirtley. "We both saw the elephant, actually."

"We looked at this piece we liked, and at the material, and imagined what it could be," said Bradley. "It definitely had the shape of an elephant's head. I did some drawings with an elephant's bust in mind, and the city liked that."

The entire elephant project – including installation – will cost about $16,000, said Kirtley. She said that is not too different from the cost of installing a play structure at a park. The carving cost was about $4,500.

"I didn't count the specific (labor) hours," said Bradley. "I've probably got about 50 hours into carving it. We used chainsaws and power tools. We sculpted it with the chainsaw and detailed it with power tools."

Because of the elephant's massive size and the fact that it will be mounted off the ground, Kirtley and Bradley believe it will last "for decades." That's even with a bunch of little kids climbing up the elephant's trunk.

Information about Bradley's "DAB Art Studio" in Sacramento is at dab-art.weebly.com.

The tree came because the low spot it sat in was deemed the best place for some infrastructure in the city's Bridge District, north of the freeway.

What does the West Sacramento Conservancy think of the elephant sculpture that is coming out of the deal over the old "butternut tree"?

Member Jeri Wingfield, speaking for herself, still mourns the old tree on Tower Street.

"It was a beautiful tree, and it's too bad it had to go, but the way the world is, you have to go with it," she recently told the News-Ledger. "I think the City tried to make a good bargain with us. . . Having a beautiful sculpture come out of it is terrific."

River City High School tennis makes playoff run but is ousted by Placer High

From River City High School

After playoff wins over Marysville, Colfax, and Escalon, the 2013 tennis season ended for the River City High School Tennis Team with a 7 to 2 defeat against Placer in the final of the Sac-Joaquin Section Division III team championships on May 17. The Raiders received wins from Lily He, 6-1,3-6,7-5 at #2 girls singles, and the #2 girls doubles team of Lilly Tong and Nicole Melido, 7-5,6-0.

"We came out a little flat, with not enough energy for such an important match," said RCHS Coach Dave Brooks. "I don't think we were overwhelmed by the occasion, playing in the Section final, but I think we were just a little too low on fuel after the big wins over Colfax in the quarterfinals and Escalon in the semis. We battled back in some matches, but Placer was too strong today. It was a great season for RC Tennis, and this was the furthest we've gone in the playoffs since 2004."

The Raiders finished the year 11 and 1 in the Sierra Valley Conference to secure the team's 17th league championship in the past 18 seasons, and 23-2 overall.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on this property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (866)-960-8299. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale

James Franco in 'Oz the Great and Powerful'

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Oz the Great and Powerful" (PG) -- Years before Dorothy and Toto landed over the rainbow, another Kansas yokel went on an adventure down the yellow brick road. Oscar Diggs (James Franco) is a small-time magician and part-time con man who hatches a silly scheme to attain greatness. He winds up in a colorful world where he befriends a flying monkey (voiced by Zach Braff) and meets three charming witches (Rachel Weisz, Michelle Williams, Mila Kunis).

Of course it's not going to measure up to the original. I'll get that out of the way first. There's no music, for one. James Franco acts like he's not supposed to carry the movie. Franco can give a real performance, but the guy isn't convincing when he's talking to computer-generated critters.

"Snitch" (PG-13) -- When Jason (Rafi Gavron) is busted for receiving a shipment of ecstasy, the teenager faces a mandatory minimum sentence of 10 years. Fortunately, his father, John (Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson), is an enormous and caring fellow. To make a deal to get his son out of trouble, John volunteers to go undercover and to take down a drug ring. It's a distressed-dad action flick with an overt message about the War on Drugs: It's bad. Johnson puts in the effort, and you can see his skill here. He's still a miscast -- an action-hero type charged with playing an everyman -- but it's an entertaining rental and somewhat unique for an action flick of its class.

"Wrong" (R) -- Do not expect this movie to make sense ... at all. It's funny. But it won't let you enjoy it as a casual experience. In "Wrong," a man (Jack Plotnick) searches for his lost dog. Palm trees decide to be pines, office cubicles are subject to torrential weather patterns, and people are just strange. There's nothing really to "get" besides the idea that this movie wants to break the mold of the slice-of-life film genre. It might frustrate some viewers. Scratching your head and going along with the absurdity on screen is the best-case scenario for such an out-there flick.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"Hansel & Gretel: Witch Hunters" (R) -- Hollywood seems to be under the impression that you can take any fairy tale, make it sexy and action-packed, and there you have a recipe for box-office success. That is, unless the execution is dim and boring. In this pointless exercise, Hansel and Gretel (Jeremy Renner and Gemma Arterton) grow into vigilante witch hunters. Somehow, they discovered the secret to building shotguns, automatic weapons and stale one-liners well before the technology existed. If only cool props, costumes and sets could make a movie good. Too bad for this flick that script and performances matter a lot more.

"Dirty Wars: The World Is a Battlefield"
by Jeremy Scahill
(Nation Books, $29.99)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Award-winning journalist Jeremy Scahill's latest book is a sober assessment of how our country has changed since 9/11. Disturbing, insightful and illuminating, it rips the scab off policies started by President George W. Bush's administration and continued by President Barack Obama -- policies that have turned our modern world into a perpetual battleground.

As one veteran of multiple Special Ops task forces put it, "The military can go wherever they please and do whatever it is they want to do, in order to achieve the national security objectives of whatever administration happens to be in power."

Is this the type of country we want to be?

Scahill argues that instead of making our world safer, our "dirty wars" are creating the very terrorists we seek to stop in countries that have not even been declared war zones, such as Yemen and Somalia. Many average citizens in the Muslim world were supportive of the United States after 9/11, but have since been "turned" by our expanding battlefields and mounting death tolls.

One of the more disturbing aspects uncovered by Scahill is that despite Obama's vow to ban torture and discontinue the use of secret prisons, the CIA continues these policies by outsourcing rendition and imprisonment. For example, the CIA has used notorious Somali warlords to hunt down suspected militants and execute them.

Scahill thinks our country has embarked on a national policy of killing our way to victory using a combination of Special Ops night raids, cruise-missile attacks and drone strikes. As he points out, you can't surrender to a drone.

Our new post-9/11 world triggers enormous destabilization and blowback, making us less safe and less secure. This is the true nature of the dirty wars that the United States government struggles to keep hidden, and why we are involved in conflicts that have no end.

Have a Happy and Healthy Vacation

Summer months are the perfect time to squeeze in a family vacation. Too often, however, we return from our travels feeling exhausted and weary from an "unfit" vacation. The reasons are many: overeating, trying to log too many miles, sporadic sleep schedules and too little exercise.

Here are a few tips on how to combine fun activities and healthful eating habits to help you and your family feel great, both on your trip and after your return home.

--Pack some healthful snacks for car travel. A small cooler or ice chest works great to keep beverages and perishable items cool and tasty. Popcorn, pretzels, fresh or dried fruit, yogurt cups, bagels, vegetable sticks, 100 percent fruit juice, whole-grain crackers and string cheese are all satisfying and healthy snack choices.

--If you're traveling by plane, drink plenty of fluids before, during and after your flight. Minimize any beverages containing caffeine or alcohol, since these can dehydrate you. Bring your own bottle of water on board, if permitted.

--Stick with lower fat or light meals, and plan in advance if possible by either eating before getting on the road or stopping somewhere with choices other than just fast food. Try not to skip meals; you'll be less likely to overeat later in the day.

--Restaurant eating can become monotonous and costly, and kids might not always appreciate the unfamiliar menu options. Why not make a quick trip to the grocery store to pick up low-sugar breakfast cereal, fruit, milk and bagels for an easy nutritious meal you can put together anywhere.

--If you're camping, plan for healthful meals in advance. Think of MyPlate and include a variety of fruits and vegetables, whole grains, protein and dairy with a long shelf-life, along with products that don't require refrigeration.

--Help your family meet their daily calcium requirements -- about three cups of milk, yogurt and cheese. For nutritious convenience, bring along grated cheese to add to spaghetti, tacos and burritos; dried milk to add to pancake mix; fluid milk for cereal; and yogurt for snacks.

Here are some tips for staying active while on the road:

--Whether you're camping or staying at a resort, take advantage of the great outdoors and go on a nature walk or hike with the entire family. See who can spot the largest variety of birds along the way. You'll reap the benefits of fitness and each other's company.

--Take along sports equipment for the entire family. A badminton or croquet set, a volleyball or Frisbee, snorkeling gear (for any nearby water attractions) and tennis racquets, all of which add up to fun and exercise.

--Ask your children to plan an activity the entire family can do while on vacation: a kickball game, catch, relay games or tag.

--Plan time for exercise -- a mid-day bike ride, morning nature walk or afternoon swim at the hotel pool will help you stay on the fitness track.

--If you're booking your vacation at a hotel, be sure and ask about available fitness facilities. Many have a pool for swimming laps, aerobics classes, weight-training equipment and jogging/walking maps of surrounding areas.

--Pack exercise clothing, walking or jogging shoes, comfy clothes and a bathing suit.

--If you're doing a lot of driving, bring your bikes and stop for a ride through the countryside. Don't forget to pack your bike helmets and sports water bottles.

You won't return home feeling the need to take a vacation if you plan ahead for a happy and healthy trip!

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 1-800-281-8219 or visit this Internet Web site www.recontrustco.com, using the file number assigned to this case TS No. 11-0116823.
